

I used to be a regular am/fm radio listener but over the last ten years the quality has deteriorated. Especially for the stations with strong signals, programming seems limited to mass appeal and the advertisement breaks are insufferably long. For a long while I discontinued listening to radio and relied on recorded media. Then I discovered XM and haven't looked back. Not only is the programming superior but the audio quality is superior. Please do not restrict satellite radio in expanding the range of programming it offers.
